

Copyright and Intellectual Property Rights

This policy applies to the websites, web services, hosting services, software and other online and digital services of Technorama LLP, hereinafter collectively referred to as the services.

Intellectual Property Rights

Our services and the associated texts, images, software, documentation, designs and other materials may be protected by copyright and other intellectual property rights.

Unless expressly stated otherwise, rights in materials developed or created by Technorama LLP are owned by Technorama LLP or by the relevant rights holder from whom Technorama LLP has obtained the necessary rights or licences.

Protected material may not be copied, published, distributed, modified or otherwise used without permission, except where such use is permitted by law, by an applicable licence or by express permission.

Media and Content

For the purposes of this policy, media includes, among other things:

- text;
- images and photographs;
- illustrations, drawings and cartoons;
- audio and video material;
- designs and graphic elements;
- digital files and other audiovisual or digitally transferable content.

Copyright in media created by Technorama LLP is owned by Technorama LLP unless expressly stated otherwise.

For third-party material, intellectual property rights remain with the original rights holder unless those rights have been legally transferred to Technorama LLP.

Software and Program Code

Software and program code developed by Technorama LLP may be protected by copyright owned by Technorama LLP.

Where third-party software or open-source software is used, modified or extended, the original rights and applicable licence terms of that software remain in force.

Technorama LLP may hold copyright in its own additions, modifications or extensions where those additions qualify independently for copyright protection and where the applicable licence terms permit this.

Where an open-source licence imposes obligations concerning the availability of source code, licence texts, copyright notices or modifications, we will comply with those obligations in accordance with the relevant licence.

Making source code available does not automatically mean that Technorama LLP provides support, maintenance or any warranty regarding its use. To the extent permitted by law, such software is made available under the terms of the applicable licence.

Documentation

Manuals, technical documentation, texts and other documentation produced by Technorama LLP may be protected by copyright.

This also applies where such documentation describes products or services supplied by third parties. Any trademarks, product names and other third-party rights remain the property of their respective rights holders.

Security Information and Trade Secrets

Technorama LLP treats confidential information relating to security measures, technical infrastructure, configurations, access methods and other non-public security information as confidential.

Such information may not be disclosed or provided to third parties without permission where a legal, contractual or other valid confidentiality obligation applies.

Publicly available information and information whose disclosure is permitted by law are not covered by this restriction.

Third-Party Materials and Rights

Our services may make use of software, images, fonts, libraries, documentation or other third-party materials. Such materials remain subject to the rights and licence terms of the relevant rights holder.

Where a licence requires acknowledgement of the author, source, copyright information or licence terms, we will provide this information where required in the relevant service, documentation or a dedicated credits or licence page.

Material made available under, for example, a Creative Commons licence, Public Domain dedication or another free or open licence will be used in accordance with the terms of that licence.

Customer and User Content

Certain Technorama LLP services allow customers and users to store, upload or make available their own text, images, files, audio, video, links or other content.

The customer or user is responsible for the content made available through our services and must ensure that they have the necessary rights and permissions to use that content.

Our services may not be used for content that infringes copyright, intellectual property rights, privacy rights or other rights of third parties, or that otherwise violates applicable laws or regulations.

Technorama LLP may block, disable access to or remove content where there is a legal basis for doing so or where it is sufficiently plausible that the content infringes third-party rights or is otherwise unlawful.

Where we take measures relating to content or an account, we will act in accordance with applicable laws and regulations and our other terms and policies.

In cases of repeated or serious misuse, we may, to the extent permitted by law, restrict, suspend or terminate access to our services.

Reporting Possible Infringement

If you believe that material made available through a Technorama LLP service infringes your copyright, intellectual property rights, privacy rights or other rights, you may report this to us.

Please provide as much of the following information as possible:

- the material to which the report relates;
- where the material was found;
- the rights you believe are being infringed;
- why you believe an infringement has occurred;
- your contact details.

We will review reports and take appropriate action where necessary.
